a large attendance of Deputies, and the public galleries were packed with peo ple, either dressed in mourning or conspiceously wearing mourning badges. When the President arose to addres the House, the most profound silence was observed throughout the Chamber. Al the Deputies arose from their seats and stood with bowed heads while the President announced the death of Louis Kossuth. The President was most deeply affected and almost broke down.

The proposals of Dr. Wekerle were adopted that the House express the nation's gratitude for the services rendered by Kossuth; that it also send a telegram, expressing sympathy with the family of the dead General; that a depu tation of members of the Lower House be appointed to go to Turin in order to ice a wreath upon Kossuth's bler, and that the House adjourn until after the

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23.—A man
entered the branch office of the San Francisco Savings Union, on Market treet, to-day and presented a paper to Assistant Cashier A. Herrick, After examining the paper, Herrick returned it. An altercation ensued between the man and the cashier, during which the former drew a pistol and fired two shots in rapid succession, the second killing Herrick.

The porter of the bank made an attempt to disarm the murder, who im-mediately turned his pistol upon him, but fortunately the assassin's aim was wild and the bullets failed of their work. The murderer fled from the bank, pur-sued by police and crowds which had been attracted to the scene by the shots He had only gone a short distance before he was captured.

The murderer gave the name of Fred

Higgins and two other hard characters of Chicago planned to rob an old citizen named Peter McCooey. When the old man awoke and started up to protect his hut the leader of the gang shot him before he could leave his bed. The murdered man was an employe of the city. A few days before the murder Mrs. McCooey drew her husband's savings, amounting to $400, from a west side bank. It is supposed that Higgins had heard of this and surmised that the money was still in the house.

CHIKO AND JOHANNA MOVE.

'resence of an Elephant Necessary to Effect the Transfer.

Chiko and Johanna, the two gorillas with Barnum & Bailey's circus, are safey installed in comfortable quarters at dadison Square Garden. It was after four hours' hard work, however, that Animal-Keeper Winter and his assistants, finally succeeded, with the aid of the baby elephant, in getting the gorilas into the moving-box at Central Park. Monkeys and gorillas have a wholesome fear of elephants, and this fact was utilized in effecting the transfer by iterally scaring Chico and Johanna out of their cages into the box.

The queer-looking animals kept up a continual how! for the four hours.

On being put into their new cage at the Garden, however, they had a circus of their own.

Chiko broke every pane of the three-quarter inch glass that lined his compartment, and Johanna followed suit. The former even succeeded in wrenching one of the bars, and directly afterwards tore the sleeve of a man who was feeding him.
